

Monkey-spot in the jungle or kick back and do the private pool thing....

HEAD FOR THE HILLS IN BALI ▲

You may think a trip to Bali is all about the beaches, but it's the mountain area of Ubud that's fast becoming the island's drawcard. Julia Roberts and Javier Bardem loved exploring the jungle-covered Monkey Forest while filming Eat, Pray, Love recently – also taking time out to shop at the great local market. Stay like a star at the lavish Villa Bukit Naga (above, from $1200 per night, villabukitnaga.com), which has one-, two- and three-bedroom suites with every luxury from infinity pools to private chefs.

'LA, Venice, Paris...' Ange contemplates her next trip over a café au lait

◀ COFFEE WITH ANGE?

Angelina Jolie was the epitome of glam as she sipped a cuppa on location in Paris while filming The Tourist with Johnny Depp recently. The scene was shot at the gorgeous Café le Nemours at Place Colette – and for anyone visiting the nearby Louvre Museum and adjacent Jardin du Palais Royal, it provides the perfect Parisian café experience (39 Avenue Mathurin Moreau, 1^{ère} arrondissement). To get into the French mood next time you head off on a trip, nab one of these cute bag tags...

Essential Travel NOTES

THE HOT DESTINATIONS AND HOW TO GET THERE IN STYLE

◀ CLASSY MOVES

Nothing makes you feel more A-list than flying at the pointy end of the plane, but when the budget doesn't stretch to business class, try these tricks for your best chance at an upgrade, courtesy of Lonely Planet's Best Ever Travel Tips ($14.99).

- Go solo – a single well-dressed person is more likely to be upgraded than a couple or family.
- Join the frequent flyer and loyalty clubs – you're more likely to be bumped up if you're a regular customer.
- Choose a popular airline and a busy time to fly – when the plane is full people are moved around.

The place to see and be seen... LA's The Ivy

◀ A-LIST LUNCH

Not all celeb hotspots are impossible to get into. The Ivy in LA is filled with famous faces, and if you make a booking early, anyone can get in. However, The Closer star Kyra Sedgwick (below), who called ahead for a table, wasn't even recognised when she turned up! "They looked at me like, "Who are you?" I said, "I called earlier. I'm Kyra." I literally almost wanted to say, "I'm Kevin Bacon's wife."
